

for the sake of a total cheap - the and - the variety - and fresh objects of interest. He is going out with a troupe of miners, the eldest son of a sister who saw him at Weymouth. They are steady young fellows - my nephews has been heard of in the theatre - my son is an antiquarian of the intense Irish Stamp - duty on Wembley, bread, pillars, round towers, and a hundred such queer things. They take good with them to live on consumption - enough I hope to enable them to pay their way and to help themselves.
But there is all day stuff to read - only it occupies my thoughts a good deal & naturally flows out. There had said from Plymouth in the 10th - and I will be likely to go and see them off. Mrs. Martineau had an interesting french friend (just married out of Cambridge) who is going to the same ship - and she writes her husband with I hope to hear some friendly notice of the boys who go as cabin passengers with Mr & Mrs. Cannon.

Mr. Macdonell who takes this one formerly a printer in Dublin. He emigrated 5 years ago - became a jeweller in Sydney & is now a prosperous merchant & a very good fellow. As he always took an interest in Anti Slavery matters & is going to Paris, I knew he would like to see Mr. Chapman and you may feel some interest in them far away countries and the differences and do facts which he is well able to satisfy. He has been much kind in giving us advice & information.

I don't know whether you know or care that Mr.
Chapman thinks we differed in judgment in having said that the English Quakers who objected to Lord Shaftes-bury's draft of the Ladies Suffrage House Address on the ground that it ~~seemed~~ ignored the principle of some degradation, were right in their objection; and that their objection is a good one, no matter how the people who make it may have erred in other points of Anti Slavery duty. I am for fair play, and think there is no unfairness or want of judgment in being so. If we refuse to be magnanimous to those who have shown a want of magnanimity ourselves, we do more harm to those ourselves than to them - and we have no right to sacrifice the Haven cause to our resentments. Mr Chambers, the success to Seble, I am bound to say I fully believe, tells me it is not the case that he thoughtfully considered the suggestion of a correction to the address intended as impudent. He would have willingly adopted it - but it was too late. Now, no matter what Mr Chapman thinks surely you did believe it a good plan to turn over with I keep it written Let us remember faithfully - but let us also be ready, in spite of the bigotry or folly of others, to resign if they are for whatever reason, ready to heed old breaches & to do as they should do.

In my opinion Mr Howe has not acted with entire fairness or magnanimity to the Ladies in his plan. I think Paton is right in his estimate of his feeble health. He should have seen Mary Waltch & Eliza Anderson, good strong women, worthy to belong to the Boston Board.

As to Paton I say nothing. The world is not for me and I would wish and we have little to say with the management of it. With a friend of mine I hope it may be greatly improved in 20,000 years where shall we be then? I would gladly hope to live where in which circumstances with all our frequent repetition of Bristol visits, when you are down so pleasant and bright in the morning with kind wishes for the dear mother, I am ever truly

Yours truly
Richd D Webb
With you remembers to Caroline when you write. I know hardly an babe of I don't like to trouble her with any undispatched Part of letter to Emma Boston April 27